SKI-TOURING WEEKEND AT ROTONDO HUT

A mediocre weather report of clouds and snow for the Realp region cast a shadow of doubt over the trip, but nevertheless, 14 dedicated snow enthusiasts from the AACZ made their way out to the Rontondohütte for a weekend in February 2016. Those who started boldly on Saturday morning navigated post to post through the low clouds, to be rewarded with blue skies around the hut in the afternoon and some great powder laps from the Lecki Pass. Others made it in just in time for dinner, catching a few rays of sun on the way up to the hut. After a hearty meal, cautious plans were forged for the following day, based on another dismal weather report.

The morning proved clearer than expected. One group headed out of the valley. Another group went up toward the Lecki Pass and ascended the Rottällihorn, catching some nice snow on the way back to Realp. A third group bet on the weather holding up and set off down the Muttengletscher, over the Blauberg Pass to the Tällistock, emerged in sunny Valais and then dropped down to Oberwald through fields of soft snow.
