the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 13.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased from 4.5 million to 6.5 million (Office for National Statistics, 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of older people, and the Government has set out a strategy for the 21st century in the White Paper on Ageing Better: Our Future as a Nation (Department of Health, 2000). The White Paper sets out a vision of a society in which older people are able to live well, and to contribute to their communities. It also sets out a number of key objectives for the Government, including: to improve the health and well-being of older people; to support older people to live independently; to ensure that older people are able to participate in their communities; and to ensure that older people are able to access the services and support they need.

The White Paper also sets out a number of key actions for the Government, including: to improve the health and well-being of older people; to support older people to live independently; to ensure that older people are able to participate in their communities; and to ensure that older people are able to access the services and support they need.
