Swiss Review's new look

Well done with the new look – I was most impressed with the new style. I particularly like the cover and the picture of the carnival characters.

Frank Romanelli, Switzerland

Well done on the new look – I think it is a big improvement.

Mark Vickers, UK

I love the new magazine. It keeps me in touch with what is happening in Switzerland. If it wasn't for this magazine, I would not be aware of the present issues there.

Marianne Scheuner, Canada

My opinion of the "Swiss Review" in its new format: attractive, informative and interesting – a well-presented link with our home country. Please carry on this way!

Marianne von Felten, Germany

When I saw the title page of the latest edition, I thought I had come across a 1960s publication by mistake. Especially, I find the print style of the magazine title old-fashioned. But I do like the new presentation of the contents very much. The differentiation of the various items makes the publication clear and legible.

Walter E. Haefliger, Switzerland

Many thanks for the lively publication. It seems to me that the quality gets better every year. The magazine lets me stay in touch with Swiss news.

Air traffic

"The trouble with air traffic control" SR 1/2000

Congratulations on the new look; the extraordinary cover photo truly attracts the reader's eye. Is it true, however, that air traffic controllers lack competence and efficiency because they are civil servants, as Sepp Moser claims in his article? What a low opinion of public service!

L. Schiff, France

What happens to air safety when air traffic control is privatised and subjected to the sacrosanct principle of profitability? This question should have been addressed by the author, who projected a radical free-market liberalism.

Alain Mairesse, Belgium

For five years our country has negotiated long and hard with the EU. Now the time is ripe to seal the bilateral agreements. They normalise our relationship with the EU, secure our economic future, and ensure our political room for negotiation.
