Our bank account is a joint one; for this to work well is purely a question of good faith."

Mrs Gerda Conzetti (38), employed at T.V. and Radio Station, Allschwil:

"My husband works in a chemical factory. I receive a monthly, definite sum for car, household and rent expenses. The actual household expenses are shared between us. My husband is quite indulgent, but if he is broke at times he says so and I jump into the breach. A pocket money problem does not exist as we are both wage earners."

Mr Alexander Seiter (60), bank manager, Biel:

"My wife is housewife only. As I work in a bank I do not deal with cash. My wife (60) receives a monthly, fixed amount of money with which she pays house rent, shopping and small necessities. Should the allowance be insufficient, which as yet never was the case, then my account would be at my wife's disposal. As for myself, I have no need for regular pocket money. Our two daughters, now grown up, also always received everything they needed." —Documentation: Stefan Thomi (Schweizer Illustrierte)
