Imports of foreign footwear have more than doubled since 1925, and in 1930 they amounted to over 3,000,000 pairs, to the value of 17,000,000f.

It is now considered probable that an increase in Swiss duties on footwear will be introduced money there, has been put into effect by a Swiss hotel company.

One of the managers of the company has visited London and opened a special account with Lloyds Bank headquarters into which winter sports visitors may pay their bills by cheque in sterling. It is a condition of the arrangement with the bank that this account shall be reserved entirely and solely for direct payment to Britishirms for goods supplied to Switzerland. To make the plan work, the company has arranged with the Swiss houses to use the money so credited for their purchases in this country. There are indications that other hotel groups are likely to follow suit, and throughout the Alpine sports resorts the usual terms have been reduced by 10 to 20 per cent in order to overcome the handicap of the depreciated pound. ated pound.

LAUSANNE.

A landslide occurred at Lausanne last Sunday in the middle of the night. The inhabitants of two large tenement houses, where there were twenty-three families, left their beds, fearing that their dwellings were about to be swept into the river by the landslide, which happened in the immediate vicinity, and which, to add to the panic, had destroyed the electric light plant.

In pitch darkness they saved whatever clothes they could lay hands on and made their way into the streets, the children being almost naked in their mothers' arms.

The landslide blocked the entrances to various The landshide blocked the entrances to various garages, houses, and factories, and when attempts were made to break through there was a sudden explosion, with tongues of flame as the result of bursting gaspipes. Over 200,000 cubic feet of ground were hurled into the river, and it was feared that the whole quarter, which is situated on a slope, might meet the same fate, for it was not until break of day that the extent of the danger could be estimated. could be estimated.

FOOTBALL.

Switzerland 1 Austria 8, in Basel. France 3 Holland 4, in Paris.

France 3 Holland 4, in Paris.

The great match of the year took place last Sunday in Basel before 25,000 spectators, with the expected result. Austria did Switzerland the honour to place in the field their strongest eleven, that team which trounced Germany away 6—0, in Vienna 5—0, and beat a good Scottish team 5—0 last May, also in Vienna. In the first half the game went more evenly, the score being 2—1 in Austria's favour.. Trello Abegglen (Grasshoppers) was the Swiss marksman, no mean achievement to get the ball past Hiden (W.A.C.) This is the goalkeeper who brought about the ban on foreign professional footballers in England, when Arsenal were thinking of engaging him for This is the goalkeeper who brought about the ban on foreign professional footballers in England, when Arsenal were thinking of engaging him for Highbury! In the second half, listening in on the wireless to an excellent broadcast, both from Beromünster and Sottens, it was almost like playing on one goal. The two Swiss Backs, Minelli and particularly Weiler II, were always in the thick of it and did extremely well under the heavy pressure exerted by these Austrian giants of the game. Pasche, too, saved many awkward situations. Of the Halfbacks, Fasson (Young Boys) was most in the picture. The Forwards had to fight an unequal battle, no support from the Halfbacks was possible and that tells the whole tale. Beaten, decisively beaten, but not disgraced! Why, even Newcastle lost 8—1 against Everton and one week later beat the Champions, the Arsenal 3—2. So, never say die!

The international match in Paris, was also broadcast, but what a difference. The unknown broadcaster could talk faster almost than he could see. Holland were leading 4—1 and it was my good fortune or misfortune to listen in at, the moment when France scored their second, and third goal. The good man became frantic and judging by the roar, so did the crowd. Well, the third goal was greeted with three rousing Hip, Hip Hip Hurrah's by the announcer! Still, it, was great fun.

SWISS CHAMPIONSHIP.

Lausanne Sports played a friendly match with Aarau and won 6—1, although two of their best players were engaged in the International in Basel. You may book Lausanne Sports for the National League, definitely.

Since jotting down the above, I have had the misfortune to run across the Editor who, although in his private capacity had not yet recovered from a severe liver attack, contracted whilst endeavouring to concoct a speech worthy of an important occasion and yet supposedly impromptu.

So, naturally, he was in a combative mood, flatly refused to pay my long overdue fees and telling me, that my articles had not brought him a single new subscriber and attributing to me the defection of all numerous supporters who are not paying their subscriptions. So I stood on my hindlegs, challenged one after another of those present in a tactful and judicious way to give me their views on Swiss Football. And poor me, although they all claimed to be subscribers to the S.O., none had even heard of Swiss Football, leave alone my articles! Well, I have lost and the Editor has won. Either my articles or his paper or both must be rubbish.
