HOLIDAYS IN SWITZERLAND.

Contrary to a wide-spread impression, the new British austerity does not entirely preclude holidaying abroad. It is perfectly legal and can be done without any special permit to travel anywhere abroad with a return ticket bought here and paid for in Sterling. Thus we can proceed to any destination in Switzerland as in ordinary times, but furnished only with five pounds. There's the rub. Only those with relations or friends in Switzerland who will invite them free of charge can take advantage of this travel freedom within its strict limitations. Still quite a few of us might be in that lucky position.

Readers' attention is drawn to the Albeina Hotel at Klosters-Dorf, run on behalf of the N.S.H. for the Swiss abroad at extremely cheap prices (11—12 francs a day all inclusive in winter and 10—11 francs in summer). It is situated most beautifully both for summer walks and winter sports. Full details can be obtained on demand to the Hon. Secretary, N.S.H., c/o Swiss Legation, 18, Montagu Place, W.1.
