Economics

Under the heading "Swiss Prefer Goods to Dollars," the Continental "Daily Mail," writes in their issue of the 10th June:—

"While Britain intends to disband the Sterling Areas's dollar pool by July 15th, British officials doubt whether Britain will then be able to disband the Sterling Area's pool of Swiss francs.

Under an agreement signed in March, 1946, and running until March 1949, Britain is responsible for the Sterling area's pooled requirements of Swiss francs.

Switzerland could hold Britain to it because, although the Anglo-American Loan Agreement was negotiated in December, 1945, it was not ratified until July, 1946, and in international law if there is conflict between any two agreements, the earlier prevails.

This is a difficult case, as Swiss francs are an even harder currency than dollars. Switzerland is reluctant to accept dollars or even gold. She wants goods.

She granted Britain (representing the whole Sterling Area) a credit of 15 million sterling to cover the whole period until March, 1949, but this has already been used.

Trade between Switzerland and the Sterling Area is now just about in the balance.

Britain's favourable trade balance with Switzerland is bigger than the British tourist expenditure there, but the difference is taken by other sterling countries, particularly South Africa and India, which have been buying much more from Switzerland than they sell her.

After July 15th, Britain would have no control over India's or South Africa's spending in Switzerland but might still have responsibility for it.

South Africa is her own judge of her requirements of any hard currency. India, like any other country, would be entitled to spend her expendable sterling in any currency area — the Swiss as well as the dollar one.

There is possibility that Britain will cut the tourist allowance of £75 for all countries, following Switzerland's decision to limit British tourists' expenditure to £50 worth of Swiss francs per head annually.

Apart from financial considerations, British officials feel that if they cut allowances for some countries only, they would virtually be directing tourists where to spend their holidays abroad.

A new rule to prevent the control of sections of the industry passing to foreign companies has been adopted by the Swiss Cinematograph Association.

The Articles of the Association have been amended to prevent the "trustifying" or monopoly control of the Swiss film industry, and to forbid financial operations which might achieve the result under camouflage.

Breach of the new rule will involve the offender with the danger of being excluded from the Association and prevented from getting a supply of films.

Humanitarian

The first group of British war invalides who have spent five weeks' holiday in Switzerland (Lake of Geneva) have returned to London fit and well.

A new group of twenty soldiers have arrived at Lausanne.

A detachment of forty War invalides are at present in Weggis (Lake of Lucerne). [A.T.S.]

The Basle section of the Swiss Red Cross recently arranged a Bazaar to acquire new materials. More than 200,000.— francs have thus been collected. A similar event, which took place in 1946 brought in 190,000.— francs. [A.T.S.]

A batch of 650 children from Darmstadt and Karlsruhe have arrived in Basle.

The "Schweizerspende" has dispatched 58 tons of powdered milk to Rumania, or enough to feed 25,000 children for one month. In addition a large quantity of bandaging material and medicaments to the value of 158,000.— francs are shortly being sent to Rumania. [A.T.S.]

Switzerland is developing a £500,000 scheme for promoting physical fitness among the youth of the country. The money will come from football pools run by a privately owned company on English and Swiss matches. Forty-five per cent. of the pools' profit goes to the State.

The camp, which is under construction, is at Magglingen, near Bienne, and will contain running tracks, swimming pools, football pitches, etc., it covers an area three miles long and three quarters of a mile wide.

VARIED AND APPETISING

With Maggi's Aspic Jelly valuable additions may be made to war-time menus. From meat, fish and vegetable "left-overs" attractive supplementary dishes can be contrived.

INVALID ASPIC

Maggi's Aspic Jelly in a small mould daintily served with two or three small strips of toast will be a welcome change from "beef tea."

FISH ASPIC

Cod or Salmon remaining from the boiled fish can be used, also prawns or shrimps. Fill the mould ¾ full and when nearly set put in the flakes of fish and fill up.

MEAT ASPIC

Cooked fresh sausage meat or meat left over from the joints may be used minced. Drop the meat into the jelly before setting and serve with a little watercress or cress.

ASPIC SANDWICHES

Spread the slices of bread with margarine and then with a thin layer of jelly. Add grated cheese, watercress, mustard and cress, meat or fish paste.

JELLIED BEEF SOUP

A rich jellied beef soup may be made instantly with the addition of boiling water. Greatly appreciated by Fire-Watchers.
