The Egyptian Government has renewed the commercial agreement concluded mid-September with the Swiss Government, which expired December 31st, for one month with the understanding of a prolongation for a further three months.

Under the plan the Government undertakes to supply Swiss spinners with Karnak cotton from its own stores at a price of 71 tallaris per qantar for fully good grade and with other varieties on the basis of fully good Ashmuni of 50 tarraris per qantar.

Against this Frs.30.6m. from the proceeds of this sale of cotton and other exports, the sum of Frs.10.6m. will be reserved for imports of machinery, medicines and other necessaries, Frs.2.5m. for textiles, watches and less necessary goods, Frs.9.5m. for material required for the Aswan hydro-electric project and Frs.8m. for invisibles, including arrears.

Swiss imports from Britain during December amounted to Frs.23.7 millions, against Frs.24.5 millions during the previous month, while exports to Britain in December rose from Frs.12.4 millions to Frs.16.5 millions.

Switzerland's exports to India during December advanced from Frs.10.4 millions to Frs.18.5 millions, while supplies in the opposite direction remained almost unchanged at Frs.1 million.

During the period under review, Switzerland's exports to the Union of South Africa declined from Frs.12.5 millions to Frs.3.1 millions, while imports were slightly higher at Frs.1.7 millions.

Germany is again becoming an important supplier, her exports to Switzerland attained the figure of Frs.29.6 millions in December.

Traffic

According to a decision taken at a recent conference of the Swiss Federal Railways, chair lifts or chair ropeways operated by Swiss private railways and other undertakings of which there is a number in Switzerland, are now considered a regular means of transport.

Chair lifts have developed from the war-time mountain lifts or primitive ropeways set up by the military to assure the regular supply of munitions to lonely defence stations in remote parts of the Alps. In many cases, the first post-war chair lifts intended for private traffic were built with surplus military materials, but gradually they developed into more comfortable and safer ropeways mainly for the use of skiers and others indulging in mountain sports. They may be classed as minor ropeways using chairs (single-seater or double-seater) instead of cabins. They are well patronised by tourists and excursionists, and now operate to fixed schedules. There are limited facilities for the conveyance of goods; hence their official recognition as a further link in the transport system. For the first time, the official Swiss railway time-table (covering also postal services, lake services, and air services) contains the schedules of thirteen chair lifts.

On January 1st, the headquarters of the Swiss Restaurant Car Company, formerly at Berne, were transferred to Olten, the railway centre at the junction of the Zurich-Berne, Basle-Gothard, and Olten-Neuchâtel-Lausanne main lines. Olten is the busiest railway centre in Switzerland with 392 trains a day leaving or arriving, on one train every 3½ min. The Swiss Restaurant Car Company is responsible for the catering services on 36 dining cars and five buffet cars, all owned by the Federal Railways.

The following deaths are reported from Switzerland:

Dr. Werner Jost, for many years surgeon-in-chief of the "Tuberkulose Heilstätte Barmelweid," in Thun, at the age of 58.

“Semain Suisse” (Service de Presse).

Le journal de modes “International Textiles,” paraissant en 5 langues à Amsterdam, écrit: “La Suisse est un phénomène mondial. Elle ne compte pas plus d’habitants que Paris, et c’est pourtant un pays d’une importance unique sur terre. Elle ne possède pas de matières premières tout en étant un pays industriel de premier ordre.” — Le film suisse “Parures” a été expédié en Egypte en 1939, il a dès lors été projeté dans les cinémas du Caire et d’Alexandre, dans les écoles d’Egypte et finalement dans les nombreux camps militaires britanniques du désert de Lybie. — Tous les tissus d’ameublement (rideaux, sièges, coussins et couvertures) du nouveau paquebot de 34,000 tonnes “Caronia,” de la Cunard White Star, ont été dessinés par une Suissesse, Melle Straub d’Amriswil. L’un des “magasins-flottants” de ce bateau vend un jeu de société: “Voyage de vacances en Suisse.”

Diverses fabriques suisses ont participé à la construction de la première station espagnole de télévision, à Barcelone.

La haute précision d’une machine à dessiner, fabriquée à Dietikon (Zurich) lui a immédiatement assuré un écoulement mondial.

Les machines à trier les coupons des bulletins de versement, créées par M. Philippe Maffei, le directeur de la division des Postes à la Direction générale des PTT qui vient de prendre sa retraite, sont maintenant connues dans le monde entier; on vient d’en livrer d’urgence outre-Atlantique.

A Genève vient de s’ouvrir la première école internationale pour chefs d’entreprises: le “Centre d’études industrielles” dont les “élèves”, âgés de 25 à 40 ans, occupent déjà des places en vue dans l’industrie.

L’expédition ethnographique du Prof. Jean Gabus au Nigeria, au Soudan et au Sahara est rentrée avec une riche documentation et une collection de films et de disques enregistrés.

Le Dr. Paul Egli, d’Uzwil (St. Gall) a été nommé professeur à l’université japonaise de Kioto.

Selon le “New-York Star”, le chef d’orchestre Ernest Ansermet a remporté un tel succès lors de sa dernière tournée en Amérique, qu’il ne pourra pas se dérober aux invitations qui lui seront faites pour la prochaine saison.

LA QUESTION JURASSIENNE.

Le rapport du Conseil d’Etat bernois relatif aux revendications présentées par le Comité de Moutier et à d’autres aspects de la question jurassienne sera achevé ces prochains jours. Il sera discuté ensuite par la commission de 21 membres instituée à cet effet par le Grand Conseil et au sein de laquelle divers changements sont survenus. C’est ainsi que le conseiller national Buri, président du groupe du parti des paysans, artisans et bourgeois du Grand Conseil et président de la commission, s’est retiré pour raison de santé. Il sera remplacé par M. Schneiter, de Muri, du même parti. M. Schneiter est député au Grand Conseil et président du Conseil communal de Muri. M. Werner Bickel, chef du groupe catholique conservateur au Grand Conseil qui a également donné sa démission à cause de son état de santé, aura pour successeur à la commission M. Sylvain Michel, ancien président du Grand Conseil, député catholique-conservateur de Courtedoux. Enfin M. Zingg, député agrarien de Laupen, démissionnaire, sera remplacé par M. Meuter, de Fenil, également du parti des paysans, artisans et bourgeois.
