The Spring Session, lasting three weeks, of the Federal Chambers (States and National Council) came to an end on the 16th of April.

An extraordinary sitting, for three days, was held from April 24th — April 26th, 1951.

The Swiss people have decided, in a referendum, that the Swiss franc should continue to be linked with gold. In consequence, the Swiss franc, will continue to be backed by gold, but the National Bank will not be bound to convert paper currency into gold coins in time of monetary upheaval or war. This position has been more or less in existence since 1936.

Customs receipts during the month of March, 1951, amounted to 51.5 million francs, or 8.5 million francs more than in March, 1950.

During the first quarter of 1951, the receipts for customs duties totalled 147.3 million francs, which is 35.3 million francs more, than during the same period in 1950.

The 35th Swiss Industries Fair, held from 7th to 17th April, 1951, in Basle, was a great success. The number of visitors recorded was over 670,000 at the turnstiles and this broke all previous records. Some 11,000 foreign visitors were registered at the Foreign Visitors' Office, coming from 67 different countries. From previous experience it can be taken that this is about half of all the foreign visitors. With few exceptions, all the 2,200 exhibitors did excellent business at the Fair. Very good orders were taken for watches, machine tools and textile machinery. The next Fair will take place from 3rd to 13th May, 1952.

The City of Lausanne is preparing to receive, in July, some 40,000 gymnasts and athletes of both sexes, who will take part in a unique and typically Swiss festival.

Gymnastics, together with marksmanship, ranks as one of Switzerland's most characteristic national sports. Almost every township and village in the country has a local Gym Club, whose members enthusiastically drill and train. It has become customary that a Federal Festival, convening clubs throughout the country, should be held every four years in a selected centre. This year, it is Lausanne's turn to act as host.

Accommodation must be found for 150,000 to 200,000 spectators over these two weekends, apart from the 40,000 participants.

The programme of the Festival is an ambitious one, for it also includes performances of an open-air play "Terres du Rhone" (with massed choir and orchestra) written by one of the highest ranking authors of Western Switzerland, C. F. Landry, and set to music by Hans Haug.

Work on the organization of this event — and it does require a great deal — has been going forward for the last two years. Two thousand five hundred voluntary helpers have been called in to cope with the task.

The interest offered by this grand spectacle of well trained, athletic bodies, will far exceed its original purpose. It will be a revelation of the harmony of movement, the perfect discipline of mass drill and eurythmics, the absolute control of thousands in concentration on a united, physical and artistic effort.

The weekend of July 7th and 8th is reserved for the ladies: 11,000 women athletes will give displays of mass drill and eurythmics and organizers have specified that the ladies "will make no attempt to break athletic records. This group will strive solely to develop typically feminine qualities and to stress the æsthetic value of their skill and the harmony of movement."

On the following weekend, July 13th to 16th, about 30,000 men will invade Lausanne. Mass demonstrations, individual performances and contests will be held at all the sports grounds in the city. On Monday, July 16th, at 11 p.m., 24,000 gymnasts will give a demonstration at the Blécherette airfield.

The unique character of the Festival resides in the fact that it is the most popular national event of its kind — together with the four-year Federal Marksmanship Festival — and participants will include gymnasts and athletes of international class.

The Loetschberg, Switzerland's highest railway tunnel and the third longest in the country, was pierced exactly 40 years ago, when men working in two parties, one from the north and the other from the south, first made contact at a point 3,000 feet above the sea.

The tunnel, which connects Berne, the Swiss capital, with Brig, runs beneath a towering 6,000-foot mass of rock and snow. It was several months after the celebrated opening of the great Simplon tunnel that work started simultaneously at Goppenstein, in the picturesque Valais, and at Kandersteg, famous holiday spot in the Bernese Oberland.

For the first time workmen used electrically-operated compressed air drills which worked wonders with the tough rock. They had to blast their way through different types of rock from chalk to granite, but they kept up a steady advance of more than a dozen yards a day. To do so, they needed 370 tons of dynamite. Exactly a year after the tunnel was pierced it was sufficiently enlarged to allow for the construction of a double track, and in July 1913, the Loetschberg line — the first normal-gauge mountain railway to run by electricity — was opened.

It not only meant the opening of a region rich in art treasures and incomparable mountain scenery, but also the introduction of a speedier access to the international Simplon line for a large part of Switzerland and vast areas of Europe.

More through carriages between Calais, Lausanne, Montreux and Brig, for the benefit of British tourists wishing to spend their holidays at resorts in French Switzerland, have been recommended by a meeting of the "Commission romande de la Ligne du Simplon", held in Lausanne.

Created several years ago by the Canton of Vaud Chamber of Commerce, the Commission meets regularly to consider ways of safeguarding interests of the great international artery which passes through Switzerland linking Paris with Milan. It numbers among its members well-known political personalities and representatives of tourist interests from the four cantons of Vaud, Geneva, Fribourg and Valais.

At its last meeting under the chairmanship of Mr. Jean Peitrequin, Mayor of Lausanne, the Commission discussed the retiming of the Simplon Orient Express, proposing the stop at Lausanne to be at a more suitable time (at present : 3.34 a.m.), the stopping of this train at Montreux, and the construction of a double track in the Rhône Valley and on the line between Basle and Yverdon.

Members of the Commission discussed the question of electrification between Dijon in France and Vallorbe on the Franco-Swiss frontier, and expressed the hope that the work would start with the least possible delay. They also want to see a speeding-up of customs and police formalities at the frontier stations of Vallorbe and Brig.

To celebrate the jubilee of the Swiss Costumes Association, a colourful festival is being held at Lucerne on September 8th and 9th, to which delegations from France, Italy, the Tyrol and Bavaria — all in their national costumes — have been invited. Thousands of people from all parts of Switzerland will take part, including groups wearing their picturesque local costumes, yodellers and flag-twirlers. At Tribschen, near the famous Richard Wagner museum, centuries-old Swiss costumes will be on view.

It was in preparation for this year's festival that the 18th-century castle of Utenberg, half-way between Lucerne and Dietschberg, was turned into a national museum of folklore and costume. One collection, known as the Panchaud de Bottens collection, was purchased two years ago and consists of 97 complete costumes from all parts of Switzerland. Exhibited on wax and wooden dolls and beautifully preserved, they provide one of the most complete collections of Swiss costumes.

Work just completed on the railway track between Villas-St.-Pierre and Chénens, in French-speaking Switzerland, will mean a speeding-up of trains between Lausanne and Berne, the Swiss capital.

Two months earlier than had been expected, work has finished on the construction of a second track. Three level crossings have been replaced by subways. Most important improvement from a technical point of view has been the enlargement of the radius of the curves, which means that express trains can now run at speeds up to 78 m.p.h., instead of 68 m.p.h. as before.
