"Tiger" Tensing, conqueror of Everest, became Tensing of the Alps and tried a type of climbing that is new to him.

With a basket lunch and a bottle of tea he set out roped to Raymond Lambert, the Swiss guide who almost conquered Everest with Tensing last year.

They tackled the 7,250ft. Similistock peak in the Rosenlauri range of central Switzerland because Lambert wanted to show Tensing what he calls "a pure rock mountain."

The "Tiger" had not climbed one before. He is more at home on the snow slopes and ice peaks of the Himalayas.

When they returned to the village of Meiringen Lambert told me: "Tensing clapped his hands with joy when I pointed to where we were going. He was very impressed, especially when we reached the most dangerous part and then the summit."

"We had sandwiches, fruit, and tea up there, still roped together. Tensing was like a little boy with a new toy. This type of mountain suits him. He was perfect on it."

Back at the village Tensing smiled and slapped Lambert and other climbers on the back.

He made them feel that he was happy to be climbing again and away from the banquets and receptions of the cities.

In the guides' club, Tensing sat down to four plates of thick soup, meat, potatoes and cheese, and liked it so much that he gestured for more.

He has won the hearts of these mountain people with his simplicity and smiles — just as he conquered London.

The panel of experts which has chosen the new "Pro Juventute" stamps now on sale in Switzerland has praised the work of Mr. Karl Bickel, who has been working untiringly for the Swiss Postal Administration and the "Pro Juventute" Foundation. Mr. Bickel lives in an isolated home on the mountain above Lake Wallenstadt, and the Director-General of the Swiss Post Office, Mr. Edouard Weber, in paying tribute to the 67-year-old artist, spoke of his simple and quiet life, despite his universal fame. As a mark of gratitude, the President of "Pro Juventute", Colonel Wille, presented Mr. Bickel with a badge. He said that the stamps designed by the artist had excited great admiration.

Many visitors to Switzerland, delighted by the distinctive musical horn of Swiss postal coaches, which are used on high Alpine roads, have wondered what history lies behind them. The three notes are, in fact, taken from the French horn solo which is heard in the overture of Rossini's "William Tell". This opera was performed for the first time in Paris in August, 1829, but it was nearly a century later before the three-note horn was used by the postal coaches. Incidentally, the use of the signal by any other vehicle is not permitted.

This year's traditional equestrian autumn event in Eastern Switzerland will again be held at Breitfeld near St. Gall. Competitors from the border districts of Germany and Austria as well as from the occupying powers have been invited. The world-famous St. Gall textile manufacturers will be arranging elegant fashion shows.

The great international racing event, "Le Grand Prix Suisse" at Berne, for motor cars, motor cycles and motor-cycle combinations at Bremgarten, near Berne, will take place on August 22nd and 23rd. Judging by the ever increasing number of applications received one can expect some very exciting battles between the leading competitors of this popular race, which, incidentally, qualifies for the world championships.

With the Susten Pass now open to traffic, all the Swiss alpine passes are fit, along their whole length, for vehicles without snow-chains.

As is known, improvements are being carried out on various roads, notably between Oberwald and Gletsch on the Furka Pass, and on the Gotthard Pass. Drivers are asked to proceed with extra care; not to attempt to take heavy vehicles over these routes; and to co-operate with road services and police directing traffic where work is in progress.

The Forclaz road from Martigny to Chamonix, in process of being repaired, should be avoided this year.

Brazil will have a prominent part to play in this year's "Comptoir Suisse" (the trade fair of Western Switzerland) which is to be held in Lausanne from September 12th to 27th. Une fabrique suisse a créé un nouveau thermomètre qui s'est imposé sur le marché mondial. Il enregistre les variations de température avec une rigoureuse exactitude. En cas d'échauffement préalable, ce thermomètre redescend toujours à la température du corps, ce qui est aussi le cas aux tropiques, lorsque la température de l'air ambiant est plus élevée que celles du corps.
