It also points out the incongruity of public campaigns for safe driving, which churches are asked to support, and in granting of permission for these races "which excite precisely those passions which are bloodying our highways".

Zurich's Main-Station Restaurant — Largest on the Continent.

Zurich's Main-Station Restaurant, locally known as "Bahnhofbuffet", is said to be the largest eating place on the Continent. Crack Swiss hotelman Primus Bon has run it for 32 years and made it, despite its mammoth size, a gourmets' paradise of distinction. Each of the many dining-rooms, tea-shops and cafés has its own atmosphere which is enhanced by permanent exhibits of works by well-known Swiss painters and sculptors. Rudolf Candrian, a member of a distinguished Swiss hotelier family, is now succeeding Mr. Bon as "railway station innkeeper" and will endeavour to live up to the traditions of Swiss hospitality. All major Swiss railways stations feature "buffets" which are not only high-class restaurants, but also islands of peace and recreation amidst hustling and bustling surroundings.
