To all this the partisans of the Initiative retort that, in view of the fact that several branches of industry have already adopted the 46- or the 45-hour week, they will have no difficulty in reducing it to 44 hours and in shouldering the compensation for wages. They forget, however that these are the most flourishing branches of industry. In those in which the 47- or 48-hour week still exists and in which economic difficulties have got to be faced, as for instance in the textile, footwear and even watchmaking industries, a reduction in working hours carried out on such a massive scale, and at so rapid a rate, cannot be achieved without repercussions on employment. The Federation of Trade Unions points out, very rightly, that solidarity forbids one to think only of the workers in the prosperous industries, without taking any heed of the others. The Federation is not opposed to a Law on working hours which would, later on, consolidate the results acquired through the Collective Agreements, but it wants a Law which will sanction a gradual reduction in working hours.

And, finally, if the Federation is against this Initiative, this is because it considers that a political party which does not possess any responsibility for the defence of the interests of workers and of employment has no business to intervene in the regulation of labour conditions. It holds the view that it is for the employers and the workers, jointly, to know what is possible and what is not. The regulation of labour conditions and the solution of social problems should remain subject to the electoral policy. The Federation of Trade Unions is of the opinion that, should the concessions made by the employers prove to be insufficient, trade unionism is strong enough to-day to defend the claims which it considers to be legitimate.
