Zurich: Due to the fact that a weatherproof ice-rink offers far more than a frozen lake the first Swiss artificial ice-rink was constructed in 1930 at the Dolder in Zurich. Very soon afterwards a succession of similar rinks were built and proved to be a contributing factor in the formation of the ever-popular Swiss Ice-Hockey teams, a sport generally agreed to be the fastest where teams are competing. Today in Switzerland there are 26 artificial ice-rinks available to the public offering a floor space of 77,500 sq. yards and accommodation for 175,000 spectators. Apart from ice skating the rinks cater for those interested in figure skating and curling. The Swiss Curling Association was formed in 1942 and nowadays administers 75 clubs and has a total membership of approx. 2,000. It is thought that the present number of ice-rinks will be doubled within a few years. During the autumn of 1960 Arosa and Chur will celebrate the opening of the first artificial ice-rink in the Grisons. Simultaneously, St. Gall and Adelboden announce the opening of their own rinks. Artificial ice-rink projects are now in hand at St. Moritz, Davos, Wetzikon, Villars-sur-Ollon and Lucerne.

Zweisimmen: For the first time in Switzerland the 9th International Snow-Rally is to be held at Zweisimmen from 25th February until 3rd March under the patronage of the "Auto Camping et Caravaning Club de France". Participants from France, Holland, England, Belgium, Germany and Switzerland will spend a few carefree days at the "sunshine village" at the foot of Rinderberg engaging in all kinds of winter sports. Approx. 300 visitors will arrive at this caravan site which is situated at the lower end of the Zweisimmen railway station, and the management are busily preparing a fine comprehensive programme of sporting events and evening entertainments.

Berne: All drivers who wish to have their cars transported through the Gotthard Tunnel this year will realise how much time has been gained through the efficiency of the latest innovations. A highly efficient loading ramp has been constructed at Göschenen and after almost two year's work there is now a second tunnel entrance into the Gotthard granite. These improvements will enable all car trains to travel on a separate railway line from the one used by passenger trains and only inside the mountain will the two tracks meet again. The new Simplon loading platforms are now in use. Motor coaches and commercial vehicles will still be consigned from Brig to Domodossola and vice versa but smaller vehicles are only transported to and from Iselle. For both directions tickets are purchased at Iselle. Car passengers may remain in the cars throughout the journey.

25 aerial cableways and ski-lifts have been constructed in the various winter sport resorts since November 1958. The new ski-lift traversing the permanent snow field in the Diavolezza district of the Grisons operates throughout the year carrying many a weary skier upwards, and at the peak of the summer months completes the magic spell of the world of snow.

Earth to the Moon and back was roughly the distance that one postal messenger in Switzerland travelled during his working life. Arnold Javet from St. Immer is now 76 years old and retired but in earlier years he had obtained permission from the Swiss postal authorities to deliver unstamped letters and packets to all the remote houses between St. Immer and La Chaux-de-Fonds.

Dry-clean containers very similar to a letter box are something completely new for the Zurich housewife. These "clean boxes", the first on the Continent, were constructed in Switzerland and are saving the housewife that long walk to the dry cleaners. The articles requiring a clean or a dye are simply placed in the container, collected by the cleaning firm and later returned to the customer's door. You can state your own delivery time too.

WINTER IN SWITZERLAND

One hundred and twenty winter resorts with two thousand hotels and boarding houses and fifty thousand beds — ski slopes of all imaginable degrees of challenge, for the beginner as well as for the competition skier, rendered accessible by 127 railway lines and 350 ski lifts, aerial cableways and chair lifts — this is what the Swiss Alps offers to all comers in the winter of 1959/60.

This impressive array of facilities, which was used to the extent of 4.1 million guest nights, or 16 per cent of Switzerland's annual volume of tourism, was not built in one day. It is the result of close to a century of experience in tourism, steady investment, and, above all, the dividend of recognizing at an early date the touristic possibilities of winter sports.

Winter tourism in Switzerland dates back to the year 1865, when Davos in the Grisons had its first holiday guests, mostly patients seeking convalescence in its mountain climate. St. Moritz followed suit in 1883, and Arosa and Grindelwald in 1888. In the last decade of the nineteenth century, winter tourism really snow-balled, to use an appropriate figure of speech. Cableways and chair lifts have recently brought a last addition to Swiss winter sports haunts: the southern canton of Ticino, where skiers can leave valleys of Mediterranean climate to ski on snowy peaks and come back again, all within a few hours. Winter tourism as we know it today is essentially the result of one sport: ski-ing. The slogan "Every Swiss a Skier" is one that is coming nearer and nearer to representing a fact. The Swiss Ski-ing Association has over 60,000 members, but the number of people who know how to ski is estimated at around half a million.

The winter season starts just before Christmas, with its peak between February and April; it ends with spring ski-ing, which is still possible on some glaciers in June. One little-known month is January; it offers rest and attentive, personal service, as well as tracking in virgin snow and on quite slopes to the skier who seeks relaxation.

The 100 Swiss ski-ing schools gave 862,813 half-day lessons last winter. The number of pupils is growing year after year, thanks also to the standard Swiss ski-ing method which is taught the same way all over the country. Thus a guest can register in Central Switzerland as a beginner one winter, and go on in following years developing his skill in the same technique, moving from class to class, whether he spends his holidays in the Grisons or in the Bernese Oberland. In six classes, teaching goes from A to Z, starting with a beginner and turning out an all-round skier.

Spring ski-ing in the high Alps will be the reward for the skier who has reached the top — be it the "Haute Route", the High Road of Alpine ski-ing in the Valais, the long glacier routes of the Bernese Oberland, or the tours of the Bernina region in the Grisons.

During the months when days get longer again, the age-old spring customs of Switzerland's mountain dwellers blossom out in colourful festivals; these are the days when those who love the mountains and ski-ing cannot resist the call of peaks and glaciers. Anyone who has ever "conquered" a peak on skis on a June morning knows what this blend of winter and summer, sun and snow, really means.
