MOTOR SPORTS AT THE 37th GENEVA SHOW

A special "Sport and Competition" section is one of the main features at this year's International Motor Show in Geneva, from 9th to 19th March.

The extraordinary development of motor sports in recent years has been world-wide. Today, there are over one million registered racing drivers around the world, and the endless number of competitions attract hundreds of million spectators annually.

From Hong Kong to East European capitals, the list of motoring events is miles long, including grands prix, road racing, circuit racing, time trials, gymkhanas, endurance races and hill climbs.

A large number of car parts and accessories are tried and tested in automobile competition, and today the ordinary driver in the street can purchase them for his own family car either to improve its safety or give it a more sportive look. To this end exist literally thousands of motoring publications — books, newspapers, magazines and specialised catalogues which are published in every language for car lovers and followers of international motor sports scene.

The direct link between technical development and race track experience, equally for mechanical security or performance and durability, makes it only normal that a special place at the Geneva Motor Show is reserved for the world of motor sports.

As well as half-a-dozen leading formula racing cars, the real stars of the big international circuits, there are thirty of the most illustrious high performance and sport racing cars on display. Visitors to the Show have a wonderful opportunity to study these thoroughbreds in detail — something that is rarely possible when one sees them in action at Sebring or Le Mans, Monte Carlo or Brands Hatch, on the Nurburgring or at Monza.

A SWISS FIRM'S CONTRIBUTION TO FRENCH AVIATION

After several years of research and experiments, an electroplating works at Vevey has succeeded in perfecting extremely precise methods of chromium plating applicable in particular to aluminium and even plastic. The quality of the work has gained such a reputation that several French aeronautical firms have despatched many parts of the landing gear for the future giant supersonic plane "Concorde". [O.S.E.C.]
