Switzerland has always to start a flight

Some 50 years ago Walter Mittelholzer took off from Zurich to make the first complete crossing of Africa by air. It took him 61 days and 21 stops to cover the 6,000 miles from Cairo to Cape Town.

Ever since then we've been inspired by his pioneering spirit to open up more and more routes across Africa.

Particularly as Herr Mittelholzer later went on to become vice-president of Swissair.

So that now not only can you cross Africa to Johannesburg a great deal faster and more comfortably in a DC10.

We'll also take you to Abidjan,
Nairobi, Cairo, Casablanca, Dakar, Yaounde, Douala, Khartoum, Lagos, Libreville, Monrovia, Nairobi, Tunis and, starting this month, Oran as well. Six of these destinations are also served by our spacious DC10s.

And with 53 flights every week from London and Manchester to Geneva and Zurich, you'll find Switzerland a most convenient place to start your next trip to Africa.
