RINGING THE CHANGES IN LOCARNO

PHOTOS: Tony Bagwell

After a dull ride in May from Domodossola (do visit the old town if you've got time) to St Maria Maggiore on the Centovalli line, the sun eventually came out and by Locarno it was quite warm. Walking down through the town under the shady arcades, we came to an open cobble area where to our surprise, a large group of historic fire engines was on show. It was obviously a morning "meet" as gradually one by one they left, each sending its message to those remaining by copious use of their sirens. Not being a fire engine anorak I can't tell you any details, but they made a very interesting sight surrounded by the old buildings.
